Wanderlust Singapore

words JOYCE HUANG

Singaporean hotelier Loh Lik Peng is on a roll. Fresh from opening two properties in East London and Shanghai this April, Loh's third Singaporean property, Wanderlust, made its debut just this July.

Housed in an old shophouse building that was originally a school, and located in the bustling Little India district, this 29-room, four-floor boutique hotel is, like the rest of Loh's hotels, design-focused. Award-winning Singaporean design agencies Asylum, :phunk studio and ffurious; and local architect firm DP architects, were each engaged to design an entire floor of the hotel, resulting in unique rooms in four different themes — Industrial Glam, Eccentricity, Is It Just Black or White, and Creature Comforts. From rooms filled with Pop Art to an all-white room that lets guests "paint" it in any colour using special lighting systems, expect entirely different adventures each time you check in here.★
